HR4011C Rotary Hammer

MAKITA's "Active" Dynamic Vibration Absorber (HR4011C and HR4010C)

Shift of air pressure in crank room and barrel room "actively" controls balancer to move opposite of piston.

AVT ANTI VIBRATION TECHNOLOGY

Vibration Absorbing Grip (HR4011C only)

Spring loaded
hinged grip absorbs vibration

Makita's new HR4011C 40mm SDS Max Rotary Hammer is good news for people in the construction industry. With its "Active" Dynamic Vibration Absorber, air pressure in the crank room and barrel room is shifted "actively" thereby controlling the movement of the balancer the opposition direction to that of the piston. This together with the spring loaded, hinged, vibration absorbing grip makes this rotary hammer extremely comfortable to use, and reduces the effects of constant exposure to vibration on hands and arms.

Continuous exposure to vibration can lead to disabilities like white-knuckle syndrome. The usual symptoms of white-knuckle syndrome include considerable tingling in the hands and wrists, general whiteness of the fingers, pain and loss of sensation in the fingers.

Under laboratory conditions the working hours per day for the HR4011C were calculated at 150 minutes. The working hours for Competitors 1 and 2 were calculated at 55 minutes and 35 minutes per day respectively under the same conditions.

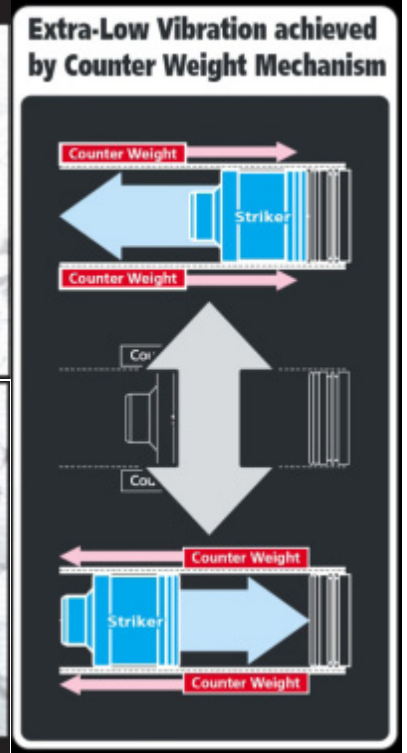

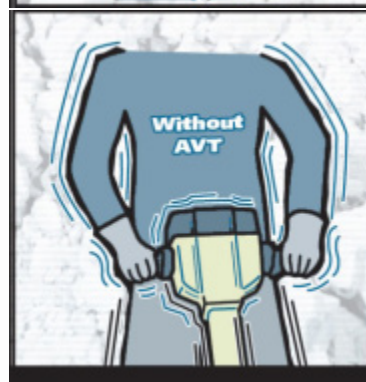

HM1810 Electric Breaker

The Makita HM1801 28.6mm Hex Shank Electric Breaker is the highest in its class for demolition efficiency. Furthermore the HM1810 is the lowest in its class for vibration, which is achieved by means of the AVT counter weight mechanism.

The Makita HM1810 is highly recommended to manage the effects exposure to vibration on the human body. Another safety feature of the Hm1810 is a warning lamp that indicates any malfunction of the electrical cord.

The HM1810 features a cylindrical tool holder with high reparability, which makes it ideal for the hire industry where machines are often abused. New bolt holes can be drilled when the original bolt holes are clogged with broken bolts. There is a flat surface for ownership engraving or identification labels, and the name plate is placed in a position where it cannot be easily damaged or scratched.

Market Alert

There are an increasing number of counterfeit products entering the South African market. These counterfeit products affect not only the Makita brand, but also reputation of the dealers who sell original Makita products.

The label on this particular counterfeit model (3612BR) clearly states that the product is from the Makita Corporation Japan, which is a blatant untruth. The 3612BR is not part of the standard range that is offered in South Africa, and there are no spares or support for this model. The inferior quality of the product and the price are clear indicators that it is not an original Makita product.
